

"Sisters," by Edith Hastings Tracy.

The pictures on this and following pages are from the Annual Exhibition of Photographs by Members of the Camera Club, at present on view at the gallery of the Club, at 121 West 68th Street, and to which the public is cordially invited. The Camera Club is a co-operative organization of amateur and professional photographers that has for many years maintained a very complete photographic establishment of laboratory, dark rooms, work rooms, studio, gallery, etc., with all incidental apparatus for the practice of every branch of photography; thus putting at the disposal of the individual members working facilities that are unique. The membership ranges from inexperienced amateurs to the most advanced amateur and professional workers.